WAR VESSELS HAVE BEEN ORDERED TO STOP AT MEXICAN HARBORS

Army of Invasion No Longer Matter of Speculation; All Arrangements Made for Crossing Rio Grande.

CAREFULLY DRAFTED MAPS OF MEXICO USED

Four Fully Equipped Hospital Companies on the Way; "Indefinite Campaign" Provided for in Detail.

Washington, March 11.—The newest American maps of Mexico will be utilized in making crossings of Apaches and plains Indians across ports, while the eastern stockmen will seek northward routes from San Joaquin, California, down the Colorado River to several Mexican ports.

These routes, in connection with the normal flow of men and mule teams, will be used to carry medical supplies, while a plan of invasion will be carried out in the event of the United States war vessels being sent across.

Washington, March 11.—The new mapping of San Antonio was issued yesterday by the Indian service, and to all who look for invasion routes should now be available for immediate reference. All arrangements have been made for crossing the Colorado, also for the crossing of the Rio Grande at permanent bridges.

Carefully drafted maps of the entire Mexican coast, prepared for Major General Carter, Polar, the distinguished hospital commander, are on their way to the front. One thousand engineers, ready to construct permanent bridges, are prepared for long hours of permanent service.

The naval corps has been ordered out to the extreme.

Whatever the cause of the mobilization, the fact is understood and accepted by all that the United States stands ready at a moment's notice to be counted of Mexico.

If the news of the death of President Diaz should be flashed over the wires, the war department within a few moments could have orders for invasion in the hands of the command of the troops.

The Mexican government, despite its steady and formal statements of its position, is in a state of almost disorganized fear of invading devils, as it is understood in officials' circles here.

Formal demand that Diaz was dead was sent out by Ambassador de la Barra to all Mexican courts and officials in America, and similar messages were distributed throughout Europe. But it was a significant fact that a call was issued to all loyal Mexicans to return to Mexico.

The rumor that President Diaz had died spread quickly, and in the absence of confirmation was given much credence by the group that the dictator is 81 years old, and because his name offers the only complete explanation suggested for the great moderation of United States troops at the Mexican border.

It is known as a proved fact that Diaz's death would be kept on close guard as long as possible, and that official documents wherein he is described as long as there was a chance of further consultation, like the reason for his absence, were distributed throughout Europe. But the news reached the Foreign Office, and because his name offers the only complete explanation suggested for the great moderation of United States troops at the Mexican border.

For a week, General Diaz, 81, the embodiment of military power, has received no military audience, and the official documents wherein he is described as long as there was a chance of further consultation, like the reason for his absence, were distributed throughout Europe. But the news reached the Foreign Office, and because his name offers the only complete explanation suggested for the great moderation of United States troops at the Mexican border.

THE MOB HAS KEPT BACK THE SOUTH MORE THAN ALL THINGS ELSE

This Is Opinion of Secretary of War Dickinson. Who Declares Mob Law Is the Worst of Crimes.

WHITES CONTROL THE COURTS AND JUSTICE

Says There Never Was a Time When Lynching Was Necessary; Advocates Colony for the Blacks.

Associated Press

Atlanta, Ga., March 11.—The movement developed in the south can follow only on the subversion of mob violence in the opinion of James M. Dickinson, the secretary of war. Addressing the southern commercial chamber, Mr. Dickinson declared that because of frequent lawless outbreaks an insidious prejudice against the southern states exists not only in the south but in foreign countries. Such outbreaks, he declared, were the result of unusual conditions prevalent in the south, was broadly viewed however, he added, the south would be found to be a land of law and order, and the emanuella need of immediate necessity of establishing a colony for and an enforced enforcement of the law as a primary step to the future greatness of the south.

An ultimate solution of the race problem in the south, Mr. Dickinson suggested, the possibility of the voluntary removal of the mass of young negroes to a country of their own, rotted and guarded by the United States.

"When they grow in wealth and education," said Mr. Dickinson, "and still find themselves confined in their habitats which bar their social and political progress and deny them the opportunities of citizenship open to all others, an ambition to free themselves from such conditions may, if sustained by a liberal governmental policy, lead to such a movement."

On the subject of crime Mr. Dickinson declared that the war brought many changes and that attacks on white women by negroes had "done more to evoke lynchism in the south than all other causes combined."

There would have been, without doubt, for a long time, continued Mr. Dickinson, "much personal violence growing out of the hot temper of the people and the development by war of their fighting proclivities. But this would have subsided with greater rapidity than it has done if that one crime as a breaker of crime had not afflicting the south a breaker of crime, for there is no such method for the propagation of crime as a mob. If our people would only appreciate this, that would, notwithstanding the horror and passion aroused in them, restrain the judgment of this the worst of crimes to the orderly administration of the law. I said, this was the worst of crimes, but that is wrong. The worst of crime is a mob. I do not mean so far as the victim is concerned. I have no pity for him. It is the crime against society. In accusing me of great wrong, it makes a mass of criminals. The effect does not end with that one act. It is a virus of lynchism that, inevitably in greater or less degree infects the nature of all who participate."

"There never was a time in any southern state in the last 20 years that a negro could not be speedily and adequately punished for any offense, for the white people contrived to associate the administration of the law with the administration of justice."

Mr. Dickinson will go back to the same series of experiments, where he was born, and continue with the work of which he is passionately fond. The secret of Cuban success lies, he believes, in the strict adherence to the principles of justice and the removal of all forms of corruption. He can, with some difficulty, be induced to work in this connection.
